Fuman, a Primary Three boy in Yunnan, China, showed up in school red-faced, with frost coating his hair and eyebrows. It was extremely cold on that day and he had braved freezing conditions to walk four kilometres to school on the day of his examinations.

As Fuman lived quite a distance from school, he had to walk for more than an hour in thin clothing along dangerous mountain paths to get there. He made a funny face when he got to class, causing his classmates to burst into laughter.

Fuman lived in a mud house with his grandmother and older sister. His father worked in another country and his mother, unable to accept their poor living conditions, had left the family when he was two. Aside from attending school, the boy also helped his grandmother with farming work. Extra food was a rare treat for the family. Their meals were mainly homegrown potatoes and rice.

Fuman liked playing basketball and reading science fiction books about aliens. He hoped to be a policeman so that he could protect his grandmother. His New Year's resolution was to study hard and get money to help treat her grandmother, who was ill. Fuman's plight touched many hearts across China and he received donations from well-wishers.

Section F: Open-ended Comprehension 2

Read the passage carefully and answer the questions that follow.

This section is designed for extended answers that parent/ teacher will have to assign and guide child to attempt after the test has been completed.

Grading: This question type is not graded on this system and will not affect the final score as it was designed in such a way that it requires manual assistance.

Grandmother and I were forced to escape from their home because of the war that was ongoing. On the way to the camp where all those whose homes were destroyed were given shelter, we were separated. I had to stop searching for her as it was getting dark. I headed towards the camp with fading hope that I would find my last family member.

As I approached the camp, I saw many people huddled together with relief written on their faces. They were grateful to have survived. I pictured Grandmother, her frail body inching towards a safe shelter where she could rest for the night. I promised myself I would find her the next day.

When I woke up, I heard voices. People around me were recounting how the sound of the aeroplanes roaring above them had frightened them when the first attack started. Many camps and villages had been destroyed. They were worried that the second attack might happen again. Therefore, the camp would be unsafe for the next few days. As I heard this, my heart shattered. How was I going to find Grandmother? I stood up and looked around. The people in the camp were all up and about, ready to move on.

Then, I heard a familiar cry and whipped my head around. There stood my grandmother. I was glad she was safe. Tears of joy streamed down my face as I ran towards her waiting arms. Finally, we were reunited.
