Section E: Comprehension (10m)

Cathy had just arrived in Africa to start her new job and join her husband who was working there. She got off the taxi ride near her hostel. Putting her haversack between her legs, she unloaded her larger piece of luggage from the boot.

Out of the blue, a motorcycle with two men approached her slowly. Without warning, one of the men grabbed her haversack as the motorcycle sped off. It had contained Cathy's passport and money. She ran after the motorcycle, but the men soon disappeared into one of the alleys. With a sigh, she made her way to the hostel.

Just then, an old man approached Cathy. She looked at him warily, fearing that her luggage would be taken away aggressively. Looking away from him, she quickened her pace. He caught up with her and cried with outstretched hands, "Money! Money!" She had enough. She told him firmly in French, "I have no money. A thief just stole all my money. I cannot give you anything."

The beggar listened attentively and pondered over her words. Then, he reached into his trousers. "I will give you money instead," he declared. Kindly, he placed an old, brown coin into Cathy's palm. She looked at it in shock. In spite of his poverty, he still chose to give what he needed the most.

Section F: Comprehension 2 (5 x 2m =10m)

Read the passage carefully and answer the questions that follow.

The frog was only half dead. Gertie grabbed it, ran into the house and headed to the kitchen at once. Laying the frog on the kitchen counter, she opened one of the drawers that held the kitchen utensils.

5 "Found it!" Gertie yelled and pumped her fist in the air. She then wiggled her index finger between the frog's mouth before poking a stiff straw into it. She blew hard into the straw, hoping that the frog would come back to life. Almost immediately, it jerked, then sprang towards the edge of the kitchen counter. Gertie moved quickly and managed to cup her hands around it.

0 "Are you ready for school?" Aunt Rae yelled at that moment. Within seconds, her aunt's head appeared at the doorway. "Why are you holding on to a frog? Get rid of the creature at once!" Aunt Rae's voice trembled and she turned pale.

Gertie beamed proudly and exclaimed, "I have just brought it back to life!"

5 "Why did you bother doing that?" asked Aunt Rae. Without waiting for her reply, Aunt Rae said firmly, "We leave for school in five minutes." Then, she walked to the living room.

Gertie shook her head. Her aunt would never understand. On the first day of school, each student had to stand in front of their classmates and share the most interesting thing that had happened during the holidays. Until she found the frog, she had not known what she could talk about.

Without wasting a moment, Gertie put the frog and some wet leaves in a shoe box. Then, she secured the lid on top of the box with a long string.

With her sharing based on her recent success, Gertie was confident that she would be the most interesting speaker in her class.
