Section G: Comprehension 1 (6m)

Maui dreamt of the day that he could go fishing with his older brothers. Each time they returned from a fishing trip, Maui would ask if he could join them on their next trip. However, Maui's brothers would always tell him that he was too young and of no help. Maui decided that he would prove to them that he was not young anymore. Secretly, he hatched a plan to prove himself and began weaving a strong fishing line. 5

Early next morning, Maui took his fishing line and hid in the hull of his brothers' canoe. Maui's brothers became aware that the canoe was much heavier than usual but none of the brothers noticed Maui hiding in the hull. When the anchor was dropped, Maui knew they were too far from land to return. Maui revealed himself to his brothers' surprise. 10

They were angry with Maui and blamed him for having no catch that morning. Maui spoke up and challenged them to fishing. The brothers laughed and threw their lines into the water confidently. Instantly, they began catching fish. In no time, the canoe was full and they were delighted with their catch.

When it was Maui's turn to fish, his brothers laughed at his fishing line. Unfazed, 15 Maui stood at the front of the canoe and spun his line out to sea. Maui's line went suddenly taut. The brothers held tightly to the side of the canoe as they began to speed across the ocean. They begged Maui to cut the line as they thought they would drown. Instead, Maui held tightly to his line and slowly, a giant fish was pulled to the surface.

The brothers were amazed at what they saw. They begged Maui for forgiveness. 20 Maui finally earned his right to join his brothers for fishing.

Section H: Comprehension (10m)

Jemma and Tammy are identical twins. Even though they are twin sisters, they enjoy doing different things. For example, if Jemma wants to swim, Tammy would want to play badminton. Jemma loves to listen to Korean popular music, while Tammy prefers to listen to classical music.

Their personalities are very different too. For example, one is messy while the other is very neat. When both of them were in Primary Four, tensions started to rise to the point that the girls could no longer stand each other. They felt they had nothing in common despite looking so similar. They were frustrated that their friends always mistook them for each other. Soon, they stopped talking to and avoided each other.

However, things began to change on the day that their report books were given out. While taking the school bus home, both of them were concerned by how affected the other looked. Their twin instincts kicked in and when they asked each other about their results, they both realised that they had each failed a subject. Jemma failed Science and Tammy failed Mathematics.

Since both girls wanted to do well for the Second Semestral Assessment for the next semester, they discussed and agreed to help each other. From that day onwards, every day, after school, Jemma tutored Tammy in Mathematics while Tammy helped Jemma in Science. Eventually, all their hard work paid off as they managed to score in all their subjects.

The girls were delighted by the improvement they had made in their studies. Their parents were elated too. They were very pleased that Jemma and Tammy had made great progress but were even more touched that they had learnt to be good sisters who helped each other.
