Section F: Comprehension 1 (10m)

Joe was an eighty-year-old man whose children had all grown up. They had moved to different cities in pursuit of their own careers. Joe chose to remain in the small village where he had spent all his life. Every year, his grandchildren, Emily and Charles, would spend their entire holidays with him in the village without fail. Last year, in preparation for their visit, the doting grandfather cleaned the house and mowed the garden. 5

Finally, the day came and Joe eagerly waited for their visit. As soon as the car pulled into the porch, the children ran towards Joe and gave him a big hug. Holding him by the hand, they walked into the house. Just then, Charles noticed that he was not wearing his favourite watch that day. "Where's your watch, Grandpa?" asked Charles. Joe looked down and saw that the watch which had kept him company for years was not there! 10

Over the next few days, his grandchildren noticed that their grandfather was not his usual jovial self. Feeling concerned, they asked him what the matter was. "The watch was a gift from your grandmother when she was still alive. Now that I've lost it, I feel as if something is missing," he said with tears in his eyes. "When did you last have it with you, Grandpa?" asked Emily. Joe thought for a moment and said, "When I was at the barn, I guess." The children searched high and low in the barn but found nothing. After an hour, Joe called off the search. 15

That night, as Charles was tossing in bed and thinking about the watch, he came up with an idea. As he was the only one awake, he decided to go to the barn all by himself. Instead of looking around, he simply sat in the middle of the barn. Not moving, he closed his eyes and waited. Then, he heard it! He traced the source of the sound and found the watch lying in the corner of one of the shelves! "I've found it!" he yelled as he burst into the house, waking everyone up. "How did you find it?" asked Joe curiously. "I simply sat in the barn. After a while, I heard the faint ticking of the watch and found it!" he said. 20 25

Section G: Comprehension 2 (10m)

The woman's eyes looked hopefully at Dad but he quickly waved her away. "Only a dollar," she pleaded. Again, Dad waved her away and turned back to me. I watched as she shuffled her feet towards the next table.

Tissue sellers were a common sight at the hawker centre at Bukit Merah and she was just one of the many tissue sellers. "Dad, she looks so pitiful. Why didn't you buy a packet of tissue paper from her?" I asked. "There are too many of them around. How many can I help?" he replied. 5

Just then, the people at the table next to us finished their meal and stood up to leave. As they walked away, I noticed an old man walk up to their table. He had a red plastic bag in his hand. Thinking that he was going to clear the table, I paid no attention to him. However, he scooped the leftovers into the bag and tied a knot on top. The man saw me staring with my mouth agape. "Boy, when you grow up, make sure you look after your parents. Don't abandon them like what my son did to us," he said. "My wife and I worked hard collecting cans and newspapers so as to see him through university. Now that he is rich and successful, he's too embarrassed to be seen with us!" Tears welled up in the old man's eyes as he spoke. He told us that his wife was sick and he was jobless. He had no choice but to pick up scraps of food to feed himself and his wife. 10 15

By then, Dad had stopped eating. Never once did the old man ask for money but Dad took a ten-dollar note from his wallet and pressed it into his hands. "It's not much, Uncle, but I hope you and Auntie can find happiness," he said. The man tried to return the gift but Dad insisted. The man looked at us with eyes of gratitude. 20

I glanced at Dad as the old man walked slowly towards a nearby block of flats with his bag of food and the ten-dollar note clutched tightly in his hands. 25
