Section C: Comprehension 1 (10 marks)

One in five primary school children have reported being "cyberbullied". According to counsellors, the number of cyberbullies among young people looks set to grow further.

"This is due to cyberbullying becoming more common over the years and thus, being mistaken as normal behavior by children," said Ms. Lee, president of the volunteer group. Mr. Tan, assistant manager of Cyber Wellness group added, "The rising number of online bullies worrying."

Mr. Tan has also commented that the victims of cyberbullying may suffer from consequences that are more serious than face-to-face bullying. On the internet, the insults and rumours can be never-ending. Furthermore, the information can even come back to haunt one in the future. The experience or shame suffered can be more intense as the audience is much bigger.

Why do children engage in cyberbullying? Perhaps, they may have done so out of boredom. Mr. Tan thinks they are egged on by their peers and that they have acted out in the heat of the moment. Ms. Lee thinks some children do not realise the reach and impact that their words can have online. She adds that most of these bullies feel bolder thinking there will not be any consequences since they hide behind their online names.

Adapted from The Straits times, Janice Tai, 'One in four secondary students admits to Cyberbullying'

Section G: Open-ended Comprehension (10 marks)

Kate grew up in a close-knit family. Kate's parents taught her at a young age to always stand up for the family. Every Sunday, Kate and her parents would visit her grandparents.

In the summer, Kate's grandmother would take her to the sea to look for mermaids or build sandcastles for princesses. Kate thought her grandmother was a lot of fun. Grandpa loved to tell stories. He would charm everyone with his tales about his life as a young navy officer on a submarine and his adventures riding his bicycle through Europe during springtime. To Kate, neither of her grandparents seemed old which was why she loved being with them.

One Sunday, while visiting her grandparents, Kate noted that Grandpa was repeating the same stories. When she asked him about his day, he could not seem to remember what he had done. At first, Kate did not think much about it until Kate witnessed Grandpa lose his cool when he could not find his keys. When her grandmother tried to tell him that he was not allowed to drive, he sulked like a child and slammed the door as he left the room. This behavior was not like Grandpa at all! Kate watched as her grandmother shook her head and sighed in dismay. Kate quietly turned away and went back to the living room.

After several more weekend visits, it was clear to Kate that something was wrong with Grandpa. She observed that Grandpa kept repeating himself and that he could not seem to remember what he had done. Kate told her mother, "This morning Grandpa did not remember my name. Mom, what's happening to Grandpa?" Kate asked.

What was Kate taught to stand up for at a young age?
