Section F: Comprehension

Long ago, a young man was taking a walk with his grandfather when they saw a pair of old and tattered shoes lying by the side of a road. The young man suggested to his grandfather to hide the shoes and play a trick on the owner of the shoes.

His grandfather rebuked his grandson, "We should never be amused at the expense of others." He added, "Instead, let's put a gold coin in each shoe, hide and watch how the discovery affects the owner." 5

Soon, the owner of the shoes appeared and trudged to the shoes. He slipped his foot into a shoe. Feeling something hard, he stooped down to check. Astonishment and wonder lit up on his face. He looked around but saw no one. 10
As he put the coin away into his pocket, his other foot came into contact with the other coin. Overcome by his feelings, he fell to his knees, looked up to the skies and uttered a fervent prayer of thanks. He had a sick wife and hungry children and the coins were certainly a timely find.

The grandfather turned to his grandson whose eyes were filled with tears and said, "Isn't that better than playing your intended trick?" 15

"Thanks for teaching me something so beautiful," the young man said.

Section G : Comprehension (10marks)

It was a hot and humid day when Motalib and I arrived in Dhaka, India. The busy streets were filled with scooter-taxis, crowded buses and people.

Motalib's eyes were drawn to the street children dressed in rags. A skinny boy about five years old was carrying a baby and begging for money. Seventeen years ago, Motalib himself had been a street beggar. As his memories came back to him vividly, Motalib turned away from me but I could see that he had tears in his eyes. 5

I met Motalib four years ago. He was a cheerful, warm and generous person. Even though he loved his Dutch parents who adopted him when he was six, he wanted to know if his birth parents were still alive. Motalib had left his birth parents without a word as he wanted to escape his life as a street beggar. 10

When Mr Ali, a man from an orphanage, approached Motalib while he was begging for money on the streets, Motalib lied that he was an orphan and went with Mr Ali. As an orphan, Motalib would have a good chance to be adopted by a rich Western family, and eventually, a Dutch couple adopted him. However, Motalib never stopped thinking about his birth parents. 15

Motalib could only remember his mother's name, Rockea. As a result, we met many 'Rockea' who claimed to have lost their son. Finding Motalib's family was becoming an impossible task. 20

On our last day, a young man knocked on our hotel room door and introduced himself as Ladar, Motalib's younger brother. Ladar bore a striking likeness to Motalib. Ladar then related a story about Rockea to us. When Motalib heard the story, he hugged Ladar tearfully. I knew that our search was finally over. 25

How do we know that the streets of Dhaka was busy?
