SOS Campaign!

SOS stands for "Save Our Strays"

How the campaign began

"SOS" is a volunteer-run campaign organised by the Society for Stray Animals (SSA). Dedicated to the welfare of animals in Singapore, the campaign was started by Ms Sapna, the founder of SSA.

"When I was little, I used to see many stray animals along the streets. Strays are homeless and unwanted animals. They often go hungry and suffer silently at the hands of animal abusers. This problem affected me. I want to do something for these animals. I want everyone to learn how to rescue and find loving homes for the strays."

~ Ms Sapna ~

The annual campaign began on a small scale in 2018 involving some schools in the North Cove estate. Targeting the student population, the campaign comprised drama and educational talks. In 2019, the campaign has extended its reach to the rest of the North Cove community.

What's coming up?

This year, the campaign will run in the month of July with activities planned for both the young and old:

- educational talks to be conducted at several primary and secondary schools in North Cove over a month
- a banner-making contest for residents on the theme of "Loving our Animals"
- roadshows held to encourage residents to be volunteers at SSA
- pet care workshops for residents
- an "Adopt a Stray Carnival" which is the highlight and held again this year due to popular demand.

Come join in the activities and support the "SOS" campaign.
Please visit www.ssa.org.sg/sos for more information.

Question 62

Primary 5 English » Primary 5 English (Term 2)

Grandma was a significant figure in my life. I was often inspired by her wisdom.

"Grandma, you are at it again!" I said, laughingly, as Grandma was, as expected, knitting bedspreads when I entered the room. "Do you ever get bored of it?" I asked casually.

"No I don't". There is a special reason why I started doing this," replied Grandma. I became more curious and could not wait to hear it. "My first bedspreads start off as 'gossip bedspreads'. Years ago, when I heard something that wasn't very nice about a person, I would tell someone else about it. I tried to keep any gossip to myself but I could never resist passing the gossip on. Finally, I decided to pick up knitting and started knitting a tablecloth. Every time I heard a gossip, instead of spreading it around, I would add another row of stitches to my knitting. Soon, the tablecloth grew too large and became a bedspread. My collection grew as I started a new piece after completing one, and so did my passion."

Grandma persevered and managed to get rid of a bad habit. She also found herself a hobby she truly enjoyed. Besides knitting, Grandma enjoyed collecting mirrors. She had at least a mirror in every room of the house. Some of the mirrors were old with intricate carvings. Others were sleek and modern with plain, straight sides. The one that I made for her was oval-shaped with seashells glued to it in two wiggly rows. "I think a mirror makes a room brighter," Grandma would say when anyone asked why she had so many mirrors.

The mirror on the dressing table was her favourite. It once belonged to her loving grandaunt whom she was close to. They often shared with each other what was happening in their lives. Grandma often used to stay with her grandaunt. One day, Grandma whispered to me, "Come, I'll let you in on a secret." She pulled out the padded stool that fitted nicely under the dressing table.

"You can crawl in through here and come out on the other side," Grandma said as she bent down and I followed. I squeezed into the space between the two sets of drawers. "I found it by chance once when my mother was upset with me. It can be your hiding place too when you want to get away from your bossy cousins," she winked at me as she continued. That became my favourite hiding place in my childhood days.

As a retired English teacher, Grandma was strict and often tested my cousins and me in our learning, and would mete out punishment for poor performance. We tried ways and means to escape the tests and punishments. Once we spent all our time playing and did not prepare for a test. We hatched a plan while the four of us were walking towards Grandma's house. The three boys and I, the only girl, made ourselves look dirty with mud and reached Grandma's house two hours later than usual.

"We helped a driver whose car tyre had burst. We helped him push his car to the side and change the tyre. He praised us for being so helpful," I said as calmly as I could, and even added that the man had driven out of town, so Grandma would not be able to prove our lie. She thought for a while and said we could skip the test that day but we had to take another one the next day.

"It is a special test so you need to fully concentrate on the test," she said the next day. She put us in different rooms. My jaw dropped when I looked at the questions. There were only two. The first question asked for my name and the second asked for the exact tyre that burst. It came with four choices: front left, front right, back left and back right. My mind was a total blank.

My cousins and I realised we had let Grandma down in the car tyre incident. We learnt to be responsible and diligent from then on. We were awed by her wisdom and wits.
