10	Parkinson's disease had recently started to torment him. He had little control over the feathery lissue and the folds wers uneven. An hour passed and his work was inally complete. A graceful crane bent its head towards him in his hand.
t	Further down in the underpass, a middle-aged man played an upbeat tune in his guitar. He had caught the crowd at the right time. Feeling magnanimous, hey dropped their tan-cent and twenty-cent coins into his little metal box.	10
1	When the lunchtime crowd reached Ah Lim, they had no more change on hem and deliberately ignored his gaze as he held his tissue packets out towards hem. Some of them would remember to buy from him the next day as they would ome in handy to reserve their seats in the hawker centre.	15
2000	Four hours. Two dollars. Lunch was still impossible. Some rice and egetables would cost him more than that. The musician swayed with his guitar as he growd tapped their feat to the beat and snapped their fingers to the rhythm. In Lim watched envicusity as the crowd chucked coin after coin into the metal box. In Lim desperately wished he was given just another dollar. That would have been mough to buy himself some lunch.	20
ė	The rumbling in the old man's stomach churned his insides. Staggering, he noved towards the musician. Maybe he could ask him for a dollar. They would schange a friendly nod every now and then. Feeling hopeful, Ah Lim went over to im. Guessing his intent, the musician shut his metal box and slid his guilar back no his case, two verses left unsung. He turned his back and walked away briskly.	25
	Exhausted, Ah Lim leaned against the familiar curve of the well. He held out is hands weakly, a tissue packet in one hand, his cap in the other, with the tissue- aper crane inside. The underpass was empty and silent. It was half past two.	30
b	The movement in his hands was uncontrollable now. He was unable to grasp the tissue packet and it slipped to the ground softly. He leaned over to pick it up, ut his vision had become blured. His breathing turned into short gasps. The acid to his stomach burned. He reached for the tissue packet again but missed it. Then, is started tumbling to the ground and hit his head.	35
n	Before losing consciousness, he saw a little girl at the edge of the underpass, unning towards him. She stopped in front of him and stared hard, ignoring her tother's agitated screams for her to stop running. She picked up the tissue-paper rane, put a dollar coin into his cap and muttered a 'thank you' before skipping owards her mother. "What's that?" her mother demanded.	40 tissue-paper crane from her daughter, but she struggled and wanted to keep it. Then she smacked her daughter hard on her hand, tore it from her hands and squashed it. "Dirtyl" she exclaimed as she threw a judgemental look at Ah Lim who was in his torn and stained clothing. The little girl started to cry but her mother dragged her out of the underpass, not noticing the pool of blood that had started to seep into the concrete of the underpass.
