asia's LEADING SUSTAINABLE LIGHT ART FESTIVAL

9 March - 1 April 2018

Marina Bay Waterfront: Free Admission*

Main event: 7:30 p.m. to 11:00 p.m.

(extended to 12:00 midnight on Friday & Saturday nights)

Held annually since 2010, I Light Marine Bay is a showcase of light art installations created by artists from Singapore and around the world. Installed around the Marina Bay waterfront, the light art installations are designed with energy-saving lighting or environmentally-triendly materials. This serves as a reminder to visitors and the general public to adopt eco-friendly habits in their everyday lives.

This year, the festival will feature enthralling light art installations and a range of tringe activities for visitors to enjoy.

Without warning, a sphere of heat so intense, as though it had life, rolled with rapidity from the kitchen to the dining room. I learnt later that the fire had begun with a few drops of oil spilled onto a stove fire, which the chell's assistant had tried to extinguish by dousing it with a pitcher of water. This foolish act only served to fan the flames.

If the fire did not immediately penetrate my consciousness, the heat of the flames did and propelled me from my seat. There was confusion all around. Loud sounds of broken glass and crockery were also heard. Fortunately, the large windows had been smashed open by a quick-witted diner 1 climbed out through them and fell onto the snow. Recovering from the shock, I was 10 immediately aware that I should move aside to allow others to escape too. I rose to my feet and began to assist those who had sustained cuts and bruises. Then together with a few men, we tried to go back into the restaurant to save those who were trapped and left behind.

In the midst of the chaos, I heard a child crying. I turned in the direction of the sound and saw two women standing in the darkness. The taller of the two was half hidden beneath a rug thrown over her shoulders and in which she had wrapped the child. Next to her and clinging to her arm was an older woman who seemed to be in some distress. She was gasping and coughing roughly. "Madams," I said, approaching them, 'can I be of any assistance?" 20

"Please, I must get my aunt home," said the younger of the two women. "I'd be grateful if you could find us transportation for she has inhaled a great deal of smoke."

Almost at once, I was in the street and caught the eye of a cab driver who had doubtlessly seen an opportunity to charge extra for his services. He would 25 not accept anything less, leaving me with little choice. In desperation, I agreed to his fare.

When we boarded the cab, I realised that the woman sitting across from me was the middle-aged wife of my Physics professor, a woman I had met on at least three occasions while studying in college.

"Mrs. Bliss," I said, addressing her, "forgive me. I did not realise . . ."

But she, breathless and unable to speak, waved my apology away with a flutter of her hand.

After alighting, I walked the two women and the child to the front door, which was almost immediately opened by William Bliss himself. It was very tate 35 and he must have been worried:

"A fire at the restaurant," I explained quickly. "We are all lucky to have escaped with our lives." William thanked me warmly for escorting his wife and niece back home.

The young woman then turned in my direction, "Will you come in?" she 40 invited. I dearly wanted to enter that house, with its promise of warmth. However, I knew that it was not appropriate under the circumstances.

"Thank you very much, but no," I said. "You must go inside now."

"Thank you, Mr. Van Tassel," she said. And I think her mind was already on her ailing aunt, for with that, she closed the door.

What caused the fire in the kitchen?
