Question 62

Primary 5 English » Primary 5 English (Term 4) 1 pt

The eighth of nine children to an impoverished farming family in the Mekong Delta, Tay Thi shone in school, but her mother demanded that she drop out after primary school and earn money as a live-in housemaid in Ho Chi Minh City. In secondary school, her mother burned her books to try to force her to drop out. However, she borrowed books from friends and continued to excel.

After Tay Thi had graduated from secondary school, she prepared secretly for the university entrance examination. Her mother found out about this when Tay Thi left to take the examination and she screamed, "I hope you fail the exams". Other students arrived at the exam location escorted by doing parents. Tay Thi arrived alone, sobbing. Still, she passed with flying colours.

With no parental subsidy, university seemed unaffordable but Tay Thi saved every penny she could. She had worked during her school vacation - in a factory job by day and in a duck soup restaurant by night until 2 am. Even during Vietnamese New Year celebrations, she worked in the fields for money.

At university, she kept to a meagre food budget of three dollars a week. Malnourished, she sometimes fainted in class. Professors and students discovered that she was starved and perintess, leaving Tay Thi feeling humilisted. "I was so upset about that," she said. In retrospect, it was a turning point because her teachers and classmates responded with kindness and help. Room to Read, an aid group, arranged a scholarship, which gave her a bit more spending money. Therefore, Tay Thi managed to eat enough to keep from fainting in public.

Tay Thi shared a small room with two other young women, all sleeping on the floor next to each other. She set up a small reading light that would not keep the others awake. She studied until 20 midnight and then set her slarm for 4 am to resume studying.

Tay Thi also helped others. First, she encouraged her older brother to return to school, so that he could become a mechanic. When he resisted, she went and registered him as a student, picking his courses and browbeating him until he gave in. Then she coaxed her younger brother to join her in university where he became a freshman. Even her parents had come around, partly because they saw that Tay Thi would soon be an English teacher and the best-paid member of the family.

Tay Thi was applying to teach in her own village school where she wanted to advocate for education. "I would like to change people's thinking. It's a way of helping children in my community," she said.

Which word in paragraph one shows that Tay Thi's family was poor?
