HOW TO START AN EDIBLE GARDEN

A Workshop By
Poppy Farmer

Join us!

- 07 November 2020, Saturday
- 2 p.m. to 5 p.m.
- The Health Kitchen, 11 Alley Way
- $48 / pax
- Inclusive of all materials

Gardening is great! Not only do you get to taste the fruits of your labour, but studies have also shown that gardening combats stress, anxiety, and contributes to better physical health.

Excited about gardening, but don't know how to start? This workshop will help you to foster your green thumbs! Learn the basics of setting up your family's own edible garden at home.

During this workshop, learn:

- The types of herbs and vegetables that are suitable to be grown in our climate
- Light and soil requirements
- Pest management

~~This workshop will include a hands-on activity, where participants will learn how to sow seeds and do stem-cuttings.~~ You'll also be able to learn how to harvest herbs and prepare Nasi Ulam.

Supported by Green Earth, Singapore

Hurry and register now at <http://www.food&fingers.com>

Limited vacancies available!

From Farm to Table

Find out more about Poppy Farmer as she shares her urban-farming experience and expertise in the interview below.

Why did you decide to venture into urban farming?

Travelling around the globe made me realise that homegrown produce tastes good, and it's loaded with nutrients. I found that almost everyone overseas maintained a little garden whilst others had small pots of herbs in their kitchen. This makes cooking much more convenient and fulfilling.

What were the challenges faced in starting up this business?

The first and most obvious problem that I faced was land scarcity. I'm really fortunate to be living with my parents who have a home garden. But even then, it's not nearly enough space.

Besides that, another challenge is just lack of experience. I wasn't particularly active in my family's home garden and had no real interest in gardening until recently.

What inspired you to educate people on urban farming?

I want to tell the story of food. In Singapore, where we import so much of our food, we've become disconnected from what we eat. We get strawberries and pumpkins all year round whereas most people around the world eat food seasonally – making them more appreciative of the produce they have.

Singaporeans have seemingly forgotten that there's a long story behind a simple plate. The ingredients had to be grown, then trucked, shipped or flown over vast distances before we can get hold of them. In order to make better food choices for ourselves, we should consider how our food is grown and the journey it takes to reach our plates.

Therefore, I designed the workshop to encourage people to ask these questions and reflect on them a bit more. During the workshop, I will show participants how to grow crops from seeds. I will also get them to pick some pre-grown herbs, and they'll use their harvest to prepare a meal.

NASI ULAM

Loosely translated from Malay to English as "rice salad", Nasi Ulam features a number of fresh local herbs & flowers which are not widely available in stores today. As a result, this traditional Peranakan dish is no longer common in the market place and not many people are aware of it.

The main purpose of the brochure is to ____

- ✓ A) encourage readers to join the workshop
- B) teach readers how to start an edible garden
- C) help readers appreciate the produce that they have
- D) help readers understand the benefits of having their own garden

Question 62

This was on 6 August 2017. I had been waiting for weeks for this day! Since Father had told me that he had successfully obtained the tickets, I had been like a cat on hot bricks. Changi Airport's Terminal 4, its newest terminal, was to open its doors that day. Only the first two hundred thousand lucky people would enjoy this special opening. The terminal would be open to the public only later in the year.

5

"Jane, let's go!" Father exclaimed. I grabbed my backpack and we set off. The mood was set for an enjoyable day.

The MRT train arrived on time. Unlike other days, the train was not crowded and there were many empty seats. We chose the two-seater at the corner. The long ride was very comfortable. Along the way, we marvelled at the beautiful skyline. Tall buildings were adorned with the National Flag in celebration of the nation's 52nd birthday. In front of me was an elderly man nodding off and it looked like he might tip over any minute. Next to him, a pretty lady was trying to focus on her mobile phone but her eyes could not help looking sideways every so often in fear of what would happen next. I smiled as I recalled an incident which happened just the previous week. My classmate was caught sleeping during a Mathematics lesson and was sternly reprimanded by the teacher.

Subsequently, the train slowed down to a halt and the doors opened at Changi Airport - the World's Best Airport, as voted by air travellers in 2017 for the fifth year in a row. We then transferred to a bus. The ride was over in just three minutes. As the bus turned the corner, I saw a plane taking off from the runway. I hurriedly took out my camera from my bag. "Yes! I snapped a shot of it!" I uttered gleefully.

20

"Good evening and welcome to Terminal 4," a young man with a bright smile greeted us. His name was Melvin and he was our guide. Our tour group had around 20 people, all eager to explore the new terminal. He went on to explain why Terminal 4 was special and different from the other terminals. Although it was Changi Airport's smallest terminal, it was big on features and technology. For example, if you were a traveller, the screening for entry or exit was automated. Security officers were not needed. A machine would scan your passport and take a photograph of your face. Once you have passed the first gate, your thumbprint would be scanned. Only then would the second gate open for you to go through. It was that easy and quick!

25

30

Melvin also said that there were many shopping and dining options at the terminal. We went on a shopping spree and having over-indulged ourselves with food, my stomach felt like it was about to burst. Our feet groaned and luckily, Terminal 4 also had many colourful and plush lounge chairs. The chairs came with chargers and electricity ports which could be used to charge mobile phones and laptops.

35

The biggest surprise awaited us when we chanced upon a cleaning robot! While Melvin was talking to us, we noticed the robot moving towards our tour group. It suddenly stopped because it had detected a lot of human obstacles blocking its way. It then turned and went off to clean other areas instead! No wonder we did not see any cleaning attendants at the terminal.

40

What an exciting day we had! Some would say airports are boring places but now after this tour, my view has changed!
