Question 62

It was minutes after midnight and Toffie's howling made me jump out of my bed. I felt my hair stand. A ghost? Are the boys fooling around? That was more likely. I reached the door in three strides and flung it open.

The familiar stench and the boys' cries that greeted me were more frightening than any ghost. Something was burning! Leaping down the stairs, with my loyal dog at my heels, I pushed open the door and rang the emergency bell. Seconds later, I was half-way up the stairs leading to the dormitories. A stream of boys collided into me, so I had to grab the iron rail to prevent myself from falling back. I managed to grab Bob, a senior, and bellowed, "Is everyone out of the Junior Dormitory?"

Just then, Ricky, the duty prefect, appeared and shouted above the din, "Take it easy! Don't push!"

I fought my way up. I grabbed Ricky by the shoulders and yelled, "Counted the juniors? Are they all out?"

Ricky replied, "Eighteen, Sir! But I didn't see the two Smith brothers!"

"Go down, line them up and send someone over to the office to call the fire brigade!" I instructed.

With a determined nod, Ricky was gone, leaving me alone on the stairs. The smoke was thickening and the glow beyond it spreading. What troubled me now was the safety of the Smith brothers who had arrived only a week ago. Then a sickening thought occurred to me. "They probably don't even know the building well enough!"

Covering my face with a handkerchief, I dashed towards the Junior Dormitory. I was stunned. Seeing the Junior Dormitory ablaze, I could not go on. However, I was terribly unwilling to leave. I stood there, not knowing what to do. Then in the light of the flames, I saw Bob again, who came towards me and gasped, "They're out on the rooftop, Sir!"

When I was at the parade square, I could see two small figures, peering down and right below them, some senior boys were carrying a large canvas sheet. With no time to lose I grabbed Bob by the arm, saying, "The rope in the gym ... the one with the hook ... we'll have to get it!"

We elbowed boys out of our way and returned with the rope shortly. I shouted, "I could make it from the window. Keep that team holding the sheet in position!" Then I ran to the window. I lifted one foot, then I scrambled up the pipe, with the rope around my neck. Once I was on the rooftop, I secured the hook under a window ledge before persuading the Smith brothers to grab the rope. I told the older Smith, Tom, "This is strong enough to support a horse. If you slip, there's a canvas sheet to catch you. Don't hesitate!"

Tom's voice seemed steady enough as he said, "I'll do it, Sir. But my brother..."

The younger Smith, Jimmy, an eight year-old, was terrified.

Above the roar of the flames, I could hear Tom coaxing his younger sibling. Between us, we managed to slip the loop over Jimmy's shoulders and tighten it around his waist. However, the boy clung to the pipe with both hands and refused to move. While I was still deciding what to do, I saw Tom's right hand move, just once and very forcefully. Then, he lifted his brother and lowered him down.

After what seemed like ages, Tom and I reached the ground safely. He was grinning and rubbing the knuckles of his right hand.

I asked, "Where's Jimmy?"

He replied, almost apologetically, "He's still unconscious, Sir. I had to do it."

He looked up, grinned again and held up his bruised knuckles for inspection.
