Question 62

Here I was <sup>at</sup> the local police station. I wanted to get help with crossing a treacherous stretch of the South China Sea. My friends had advised me to reach out to the police chief as he was someone I would be able to trust. I told him how I had read about pirates that raided cargo boats and my concerns.
"Oh, the pirates are not as bad as what you read in papers," he replied. "Our police have many boats patrolling the waters to make sure everything is safe. Come, I'll introduce you to a boat-owner who knows these waters well." The police chief then introduced Samad to me.	5
"The pirates usually leave the local passenger boats alone. We'll sail on Saturday. It will be safe," Samad, who ferried locals in his boat, reassured me.	10
Saturday came and I made my way to the harbour. I could not wait to set off on my journey. However, when I saw Samad's boat, I began to feel otherwise. The boat was in a state of disrepair. The body had several cracks painted over and the wood of the deck looked old and weak. When I saw that it was named "Sturdy Surfer", I could not help but roll my eyes. As I did not have any other options, I reluctantly boarded the boat.	15
While out at sea, the boat engine sputtered laboriously and I could only pray it would last the journey. By late afternoon, there was bad news. The boat engine stopped completely! We were now drifting in the open sea!
Just as the evening sky fell, a motorboat suddenly arrived alongside our boat. At first, I was hopeful that someone was here to rescue us. Boy was I wrong! Several thin and agile men clambered aboard our boat. They stared at me puzzledly and talked among themselves in a strange language. Then one of them, I assumed to be the leader, pushed the boat-owner aside and headed straight for me — the foreigner.	20
He noticed two fifty-dollar notes in my shirt pocket. "May I have one?" he asked me in English, with a polite smile. It surprised me because of how perfect it sounded. I took out one of the notes and handed it to him.	25
"You and I are friends now," he said, and he threw his arms round my shoulder. "My name is Musa."	30
"Give me your watch," another pirate, whom they called Ali, suddenly bellowed. He appeared hostile. However, I was not about to part with my watch which had sentimental value. Hoping to humour him, I forced myself to smile back.
"Then I want your boots," I replied, smiling and putting on a brave front. I knew that any sign of aggression or fear would trigger off violence. Ali looked confused before scowling at my smile and my counter-demands. He, however, was not going to take no for an answer. He took a step towards me.	35
"Your watch!" he roared, his hand moved threateningly to the gun on his hip.
"How about your boots?" I asked politely, trying to stay calm.
Sensing the tension, Musa very tactfully intervened. Ignoring Ali's demand, he gathered another two pirates nearby and began to repeat my words in a singsong manner. I was surprised at how sensitive Musa was of my situation.	40
"How about, how about, how about your boots?" The two pirates and Musa began to bounce to the rhythm of their nonsensical song. They then threw their arms around me and pulled me close. I joined in their chant and we were soon bouncing around in a hilarious scene. Despite my fear, I continued to sing and dance. I knew I was not out of danger yet.	45

Somehow the crazy dance worked! Ali gazed at us with his mouth agape. When the ingenious Musa invited him into our bouncing group, Ali joined in. The moment had passed! I had never felt so relieved in my life!	50
Soon, the rest of the pirate crew had gathered everything precious in the boat. The pirates then scrambled into their boat, waved at us and sped away. Samad and I stared at each other, not quite believing what had just happened. We were still stranded in the open sea. Maybe one of the many police boats would come round and get us soon.	55
