Section H: Comprehension 2

Read the passage below.

"Don't worry, Mike. I'll be cheering for you during your performance later," my best friend, Lucas, reassured me. I bade farewell to him before making my way to the school auditorium. It was Anglo-Chinese School's 125th anniversary, and I was asked to perform for one of the concert items.

Soon, the concert started. I was perspiring profusely. I peeped out from the stage curtains and scanned the audience for Lucas. I could not see him anywhere. That made me even more nervous.

"Next up ...is Mike Hannigan!" the host announced. I was horrified! I breathed in and out deeply and tried to replace my negative thoughts with positive ones. After calming myself down, I made my way up the stage. I waited for the cue to begin singing. However, when I opened my mouth to sing, no words came out. I was doomed.

That was when I heard a familiar voice shout from across the hall, "Don't worry, Mike. You can do it!" It was Lucas! He was there after all!

Mustering my courage, I sang the song with my utmost effort. To my surprise, a melodious voice filled the school hall.

The crowd applauded loudly for me when I finished my song. It was over the moon. At the end of the concert, Lucas rushed over to me and praised me for my wonderful performance. I was thankful to have such a supportive friend. Without his support, I would never have overcome my stage fright.
