Once there was an old man who lived with his three sons in a village. Although his sons respected him, they argued with one another all the time. The old man was very sad because of this. He tried his best to stop them but failed. The villagers did not think highly of them because of their constant arguments.

The old man's sons continued arguing and refused to listen to him. One 5 day, the old man decided to teach them a lesson on the importance of being united. He told them, "I will give you a bundle of sticks. Separate each stick and break it into two. The one who breaks all his sticks in the shortest time will be rewarded."

The boys easily broke each of the sticks into pieces in minutes and they 10 started arguing who was the fastest. Then, the old man said that each of them would now have to break another bundle of sticks as a whole. The boys tried many times but failed to do it.

The old man advised, "Sons, you could easily break each stick but you were not able to break all the sticks that were in a bundle! If you are united, 15 nobody can do any harm to you. However, if you do not support one another, anyone can easily defeat you."

The three sons finally understood the power of being united.
